

EXHIBITION AT SLUGGETTS BY W.I.

The West Saanich Women's Institute held an exhibition of women's work at the Institute Hall at Sluggetts, on Wednesday afternoon.

The affair was formally opened by Mrs. H. Crocker, president of the Victoria Women's Institute, who gave the members a great deal of praise for their undertaking and much encouragement in their work. Mrs. Osborne introduced the speaker.

Several representatives of other Institutes were in attendance. Some beautiful needlework was shown, hand-made lingerie being among some of the most attractive exhibits.

Knitted silk sweaters were also shown as well as several beautiful designs in tatting.

A collection of tulip bulbs was the object of much comment, and several enquiries were made by would-be purchasers.

Home cooking, flowers and fancy work found a ready sale during the afternoon.

Tea was served from 4 to 6. A card party was held in the evening and nearly fifty persons attended this.

A neat sum was realized from this event and the members are much pleased with the success of their venture.

WEEKLY NEWS BUDGET FROM JAMES ISLAND

Miss R. Richards and Mr. C. Holland Win Prizes in Tennis Championships

(Review Correspondent.)
JAMES ISLAND, Oct. 15.—At the time of writing a storm is raging outside and the James Island correspondent, by the light of one glittering candle, is trying to scrape a few poor items of news together. A branch or tree or something is sitting on the wires somewhere and we have been plunged suddenly into darkness. The Anacortes ferry is taking refuge at our village wharf, the smaller boats are in danger and farm fences are flying all about the place.

On Saturday the finals of the hard court championships were played off at the Y. M. C. A. courts, Victoria. Out of the five sets to be played Miss Ruth Richards and Mr. Clan Holland, of this island, easily won three right off against Miss Ponsford and Mr. Galbraith, 6-2, 6-2, 6-4. The champions were then awarded prizes. Miss Richards received a handsome sweater and Mr. Holland a tennis racket.

Mr. and Mrs. V. G. Ellis, from Seattle, were the guests of Mrs. Malcolm last week-end.

On Sunday the Ganges football team visited our island. It was good to see the old "Sterling" again, very much smartened up, approaching our shores. The game was an exciting one, Mr. W. Bond was referee, and owing to an unfortunate arrangement of players and the loss of one good man our team did not do quite so well as usual and lost 1 to 2. This followed a most sumptuous feed in the No. 2 Shand Boarding House where the visitors were entertained with music and dancing and waited on by a committee of ladies, chief of whom were Madames Lynch, Dixon, Thomas and Bond.

Mr. and Mrs. Read, of Victoria, visited Mrs. Kennedy on Sunday.

Miss Doris Bowker spent last week with friends in Victoria.

Mr. and Mrs. Gould and Gordon Findlay, all formerly belonging to this island, are visiting here.

The Allen's usual Sunday picnic party was held on Jones Island where they lunched on kipping sandwiches and very much diluted tea.

Tues. 16.—The cause of the darkness last night was a big tree falling over the power line at the Black Works which put the lights of the whole island out of commission.

It's an ill wind that blows nobody good, and last night's storm has blown down the two tall chimneys left as a menace amongst the ruins of the farm house which was burned down last summer.

Mr. Ingle's launch the "Lassie" went adrift and has not been heard of at the time of writing. Mr. Rowan's boat also broke loose but was found tangled up at the wharf.

The Fourth Annual meeting of the Gulf Islands Board of Trade, was held in the Mahon Hall, Ganges, on Friday, Oct. 12. PRETTY WEDDING AT KEATING

On Thursday evening, October 11, the marriage of Miss Myrtle Valentine Frances, third daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. Young, of Keating Cross Road, and Mr. Harry Stephens, of Lime, Ore., took place at the home of the bride's parents, the Rev. T. Griffiths, of Sidney, officiating. Only immediate relatives of the contracting parties were present.

The rooms were beautifully decorated with Autumn leaves and flowers, the bridal couple standing beneath a bell of pink and yellow chrysanthemums. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, looked winsome in her gown of white silk with draperies of net, and tulle veil held in place by pearl ornaments. She carried a sheaf of roses and maidenhair fern.

Miss Ruby Young, sister of the bride, wore a becoming gown of fawn-colored silk with trimmings of gold lace and carried a bouquet of pink chrysanthemums and maidenhair fern. The bridegroom was supported by Mr. Harold Young. Following the ceremony a buffet supper was served. The young couple were the recipients of a number of gifts from their large circle of friends. The bride's going-away dress was of brown Canton crepe and with this she wore a brown coat, prettily embroidered and velvet hat to match.

Mr. and Mrs. Stephens will spend a few days in motoring to up-island points, after which they will return to Keating for a brief stay. They will reside in Lime, Ore.

The bride was one of Keatings most popular young ladies being an active member in the Girls' Institute club since its inception. She will be greatly missed by a wide circle of friends who will join in wishing her a long and happy married life.

Michell, Mr. F. Michell and A. Styan. Second prizes were presented to: Mrs. W. Kersey, Mrs. W. Butler, Mr. J. Sutherland and R. Michell.

The young lady was most appreciative of this mark of friendship on the part of her co-workers and made suitable reply, expressing her thanks. A proof of the mildness of the season, and wonderful weather enjoyed during the whole of the present autumn, is the announcement that at a dance to be held at the Temperance Hall, Keating, on Friday evening, Oct. 19, strawberries and cream will be served to the patrons.

It is nothing unusual to gather a few strawberries or raspberries even up to the middle of November, but this year the growers have been able to provide several crates for the local market, and on Sunday afternoon, passing motorists were able to procure the fresh fruit at some of the fruit stands.

The only noise on the island this week has been the fog horn. It has given tongue during part of the day and most nights this week. Perhaps it will hardly be credited that those of us who are the lightest sleepers and are awake at the slightest sound, can sleep quite peacefully when the horn is bellowing its loudest. Several boats put into Miners Bay for safe anchorage during the fog, among them being the "Tye," "Farquar," and the "Crofton."

Guests at Grand View Lodge this week were: Mr. Legrue, Mr. Drivider, Mr. Driver.

Mr. Naylor has been drilling 3 or 4 feet deeper in his well in the orchard, and has been busy building a store house for his apples. I saw a splendid specimen from his orchard of a 20-ounce Pippen.

Mr. Cain returned from Victoria Saturday.

We all felt quite blue Saturday when Miss Luten left on the "Princess" en route for England. She will be missed greatly by all of us. She has been so ready to give us the benefit of her hospital training by advising and lending a hand when it was impossible to get a doctor. We all hope it will not be long before we welcome her back among us once more.

Mrs. Emery and Laura returned Monday from Victoria.

Mrs. W. Deacon and Miss C. Deacon were kept busy the early part of the week as thrashing was in full swing and 25 sat down to each meal. It took some pie making, as I believe the usual number of pies consumed at a sitting being 11.

RECITAL AT BEACH HOUSE

A musical recital by the pupils of Mrs. Bridges was held at Beach House last night, the parents of pupils and friends being invited, and so many accepted the invitation that Beach House was filled to capacity, many having to stand on the verandah. The program was long, but everyone enjoyed it so much that it could have been longer.

Miss Edith Taylor, from Victoria, was very much admired, both for her playing and technique, also Miss Doris Welch, of Victoria, who showed great talent. Miss Adeline Crossley and Miss Florence Hambly showed evidence of talent as well as careful training, and of the younger pupils little Alberta Critchley received great praise for the pretty way she held her hands, as well as her playing.

Here and There

A grant of $25,700 to the Salvation Army to aid Canadian emigration work in Great Britain has been authorized by a Canadian Order in Council.

According to information received by the Canadian Pacific Railway at Winnipeg, sixty-three bushels of wheat to the acre has been harvested on the farm of T. M. Ballantyne, three miles north of Lacombe, Alberta. The wheat graded No. 1 and weighed 64 pounds to the bushel.

Weighing 3,170 pounds, a steer, said to be the largest ever received in Winnipeg, arrived at the union stockyards from Wainwright, Alberta. It was sold for $250, the highest selling price of any steer in Winnipeg since the war.

The Canadian Pacific S.S. "Brunton," which arrived in Liverpool on September 5th, put up what is considered to be a record in the speedy discharge of cargo when she sailed the following day, Sept. 6th, at 7 p.m., having discharged over 2,000 tons of cargo.

It is announced that the Canadian Pacific Railway will increase the size of its irrigation headgates at Kimball, in southern Alberta, by 50 per cent in anticipation of an increase in area of 40,000 acres in the Lethbridge district. Water will be turned into the ditches of the Lethbridge Northern project, it is expected, some time this fall.

Buffalo steak will be abundant in Canada this fall. A herd of 2,000 surplus Buffalo wandering on the range in the National Park at Wainwright will be slaughtered by an Order-in-Council, and the meat and skins sold. For several years the Government has paid special attention to the preservation of the buffalo and the work has been so successful that the National Parks are now overstocked.

At a dinner given in his honor by the Vancouver Board of Trade, E. W. Beatty, President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, announced that the Company proposed immediately to add two large modern steamers to its coast fleet in order to take care of its increasing tourist traffic over the Company's Pacific Coastal lines. He also announced the early completion of a new pier at Vancouver at a cost of several millions.

There have been large increases in the number of pure bred animals in Canada during the decade between the last two censuses. The increase in the number of pure bred horses between 1911 and 1921 was 44 per cent; of cattle, 139 per cent; of sheep, 75 per cent, and of swine, nearly 44 per cent. The number of pure bred horses in the Dominion in 1921 was 47,782; cattle, 296,656; sheep, 93,643, and of swine, 81,143.

A conservative estimate of the amount of money spent in Quebec by tourists reaches $2,353,750. From the beginning of May until the first of September, 15,000 motor tourists had called for information at the offices of the Quebec Auto Club. Taking an average of four people to each car, this meant that at least 60,000 people had come to the city by automobiles. Of this number there were approximately 3,000 camping parties, or 12,000 people.

At the Chateau Frontenac, Quebec, recently, Colonel J. S. Dennis, Chief Commissioner of Colonization of the Canadian Pacific Railway, outlined in a detailed speech existing conditions in Canada and prospects for the future. He emphatically stated that there was no cause for discouragement, but, on the contrary, every prospect of a renewal of rapid development, including an increase in our population and the development of our latent natural resources in such a way as to insure, in the comparatively near future, that we should be out of the woods, and progressing rapidly to a large population and favorable business and financial conditions.

WORTH REMEMBERING

WHEN TRIMMING FLOWERS

Cut flowers will last longer if their ends are clipped with a sharp knife, rather than scissors, as scissors compress the stems and the water is not taken up so readily. A clean cut with a knife leaves the stems open to absorb the liquid.

DIRTY WORK

The hands can be protected during dirty jobs, such as painting and cleaning, if common soap is moistened and rubbed into the pores, around the cuticle and under the fingernails. When the work is finished the dirt will wash off with the soap.

WHEN FERNS TURN BROWN

When ferns look as though they are going to die, put a tablespoonful of castor oil at the root of each fern. It fairly rejuvenates them.

STARCHED CLOTHES

If the starched clothes should be caught out on the line in a rain storm, do not take them down but let them remain until dry and they will retain their original stiffness.

If you have any old magazines, why not hand them into the Sidney Library. Many other people would probably be glad to read them.

"My Heart Would Palpitate,
I Had Weak Spells"

Mrs. L. Whiting, 202 King St. West, Brockville, Ont., writes:—

"I took very sick with my nerves and stomach, and seemed to be all run down. At times my heart would flutter and palpitate so and I would take such weak spells in the pit of my stomach that I sometimes thought I would never get better. I had almost given up hope when a friend advised the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I did not stop until I had taken twenty-five boxes. It has done wonders for me and I want to recommend it to everyone."

Canadian Rockies Lure Noted Artists

CARL RUNGUIS

BELMORE BROWNE'S STUDIO, BANFF

Noted artists, famous moving picture directors and expert scenic photographers, like thousands of tourists, have succumbed to the lure of the innumerable beauties of Banff and the Canadian Pacific Rockies. Artists in increasing numbers each year spend the summer on the trail in the mountains transferring these beauties to canvas. For seventeen years Carl Runguis, celebrated painter of wild animals in their native haunts, has been a regular visitor to Banff. Now he lives there most of the year and has built his own bungalow and studio. In 1921 Runguis won the $1,000 Altman prize, but, being foreign born, was disqualified, whereupon the National Academy of Design bought the painting for $1,000 and it now hangs in the Corcoran Art Gallery, Washington.

Belmore Browne, artist, author, explorer and conqueror of Mt. McKinley, 20,300 feet, lives in his own bungalow-studio in Banff the year round except when exhibiting in New York. He and Runguis both study the mountain goats, sheep, deer and bear in their wilderness homes and paint them and their majestic scenic backgrounds. Richard M. Kimbel, landscape painter, has spent two summers in Banff and is painting at Lake O'Hara, near Lake Louise, and last year W. Langdon Kihn lived a month on the Stoney Indian reservation making pastel portraits of the big chiefs, little papooses, squaws and guides. Leonard M. Davis, who paints wonderful landscapes in Alaska and the Canadian Rockies with a palette knife, has joined the Banff art colony and expects to make his winter home in near-by Calgary.

The lure of Canada's Switzerland drew John Singer Sergeant, R. A., to beautiful Lake O'Hara, in the heart of the Great Divide, and with his easel planted in the white and pink heather of an Alpine meadow 6,600 feet above sea level this exquisite jade-green lake and the towering mountains in which it is cupped. Charles W. Simpson, R. C. A., of Montreal; Oliver Dennett Grover, of Chicago; Philip R. Goodwin, Edward Potthast and Albert Groll of New York and many other painters of note have found inspiration in this scenic wonderland. As for those humbler artists, the tourists with cameras, they are to be seen snapping everywhere in the bungalow camps, by the lakeside and along the trails making beautiful pictures which inspire their envious friends to visit Banff and do likewise.

CLEANING FIREARMS

In cleaning a firearm it is well to remember a few minutes devoted to cleaning by the proper methods within an hour or two of the time when the firearm is fired, is worth more in results than an hour's labor two or three days later.

Research has shown the principal trouble in the way of rust and pitting is caused by one of the components of the primer. This substance, known as potassium chlorate, is present in all modern primers and unfortunately is practically insoluble in oil.

It is, however, soluble in water, and that is why ordinary ammonia is so effective in cleaning the inside of a barrel. The following rules for cleaning firearms, if followed intelligently, will keep the barrel always in good shape.

Pass through the barrel two patches thoroughly saturated with strong ammonia. Follow with four or five dry patches and then with one patch soaked with some high grade neutral oil. If the ammonia patches come out a very deep blue color, metal fouling is present in the barrel and the ammonia treatment should be continued beyond the first stage. Ammonia attacks brass.

Scrub the barrel with a brass bristle brush. Pass two ammonia soaked patches through, followed by four or five dry patches and then an oily one.

LOUGHBOROUGH'S CARILLON

The many war memorials erected up and down Great Britain and in British Lands overseas to commemorate those who fell in the Great War have taken various forms. That, however, which was unveiled at Loughborough in Leicestershire recently by Field-Marshal Sir William Robertson and dedicated by the Bishop of Peterborough, is unique.

When, soon after the Armistice, the people of Loughborough decided to perpetuate the memory of those of the borough's sons who had given their lives for their country, there was some diversity of opinion as to the form the memorial should take. Ultimately the committee appointed to deal with the question decided to submit to the vote of the townspeople the three proposals which had found the most favor. These were a health centre, some form of monument, and a tower and carillon. The plebiscite showed a majority in favor of the last idea, which was accordingly adopted.

It was natural that the people of Loughborough should appreciate not only the appropriateness of including in their memorial a carillon, which inevitably suggests the bell-music of Belgium, but also the civic value of this form of music. For Loughborough, in Messrs. Taylor's works, possesses the most famous bell-foundry in the world.

A memorial of the kind agreed upon was a serious undertaking for a town the size of Loughborough. But its 26,000 inhabitants answered the call of local patriotism to such purpose that the committee was able in spite of trade depression to begin work upon the tower early in 1921.

The site chosen was in the centre of Queen's Park, whence the sound of the bells would carry equally to the quarters of the town that surround it on three sides. A bronze tablet in the entrance hall of the now completed building records that the foundation stones were laid on January 22, 1922, by General Lord Horne, the commander of a section of the British Army in France to which the local units were attached, and by Mrs. P. J. Godben, who was chosen by lot from amongst the relatives of the fallen. The Campanile, which is the design of Mr. Walter Tapper, is a dignified piece of work. It is built of the fine local red-brick, and its copper-covered cupola rises to the height of 152 feet. The base and facings of the tower are of Portland stone. There are three rooms in its lower portion, two of which will probably be used as a war museum. In a chamber above these is the clavier, or key-board, where the bell-player will play on what is almost certainly the most perfect carillon the world has seen. That this claim can without exaggeration be made is owing to the experimental and inventive work carried on during the past 30 years by the great Taylor Foundry, where the bells have been cast and the whole carillon put together.

The bells of the Loughborough Memorial Carillon are forty-seven in number, the heaviest weighing 4 tons 4 cwt., and standing 5 ft. high, the smallest being only 20 lb. in weight and 7 1/2 in. in height. Their compass is four octaves chromatic, the lowest "C sharp," and "D sharp" being missing. The bell-chamber has been carefully designed acoustically so that the sound of the larger bells shall not tend to overpower those of the smaller, as is the case in some of the famous Belgian carillons. For pureness of intonation and beauty of tone these Loughborough bells have no equal among their older Belgian and Dutch rivals, whilst the mechanism which operates the bell-clappers—carillon bells are struck, not rung—from the keyboard is the most perfect in existence. Its touch is so light that a child could sound the heaviest bells without effort. A noteworthy feature of the bells is that each is the gift either of individuals—the largest has been given by Mr. Edmund Denton Taylor, their founder, in memory of his three nephews killed in action—at local organizations, or of the men, women, and children of Loughborough, grouped in their trades and schools. The total cost of the memorial has been about £18,000.

CANADA NOW STRONGER THAN EVER

The fact is that the financial world of Canada is stronger today than at any time since the war, says the October letter of the Canadian Bank of Commerce. A large percentage of its assets are in the form of cash or of securities that can quickly be converted into cash, and as frozen credits are liquidated or frankly written off an increasing proportion of its total assets can be regarded as representing the actual working capital of the nation. It only requires a persistent adherence to the principles of sound business, such as have saved Canada in the past from the worst effects of world-wide panic in order to vindicate to the full the Canadian credit system.

TO RESTORE CONFIDENCE

Hon. Mr. Fielding explains with sound logic that the failure of the Home Bank was due to conditions which prevailed prior to the passing of the latest amendments to the Bank Act. The business and financial community will agree with him that the regulations as they now stand can, if properly enforced, prevent such losses as have been experienced by the Home and some of the other banks from being covered up in the reports to the government and to the shareholders, and that these amendments should be given a fair trial.

But at the same time it is quite apparent that the public is not satisfied that their deposits are adequately safeguarded. The resolutions of the depositors of the Home Bank, the demands of the press throughout the country and the expressions from various public bodies are evidences of the tenor of public opinion which find their definite reflection in the withdrawal of deposits from a number of banks as revealed by the bank statement.

Mr. Melding fears a system of inspection which would place too much responsibility on the government. The business community would also be apprehensive of such a system. But practical bankers and financiers believe that detailed inspection would not be necessary—that head office supervision of the large loans would suffice to check advances on venture—some enterprises through the Canadian Bankers' Association along the lines of the Chicago Clearing House plan, outlined in The Financial Post a couple of weeks ago, would have the same desired effect. There are also suggestions as to limitation of commercial loans along the lines of re-insurance by the insurance companies or the guarantee of deposits through a central fund, which should be carefully considered in view of the present rather serious situation.

It is highly important that something be done to restore the confidence of the public in the Canadian banks. The problem is up to the Canadian Bankers' Association and Mr. Melding. The alternative to satisfying the public that their deposits are safe in the chartered banks will be a sweeping popular demand for government banks which even a government alive to the dangers of such a system might not be able to resist.

TO GET TOURISTS TO MAKE ROADS PAY

Strong efforts are being put forward by the provincial government to populate the territory tributary to the Pacific Great Eastern Railway, the government-owned line. The government realizes that the surest way of making the railroad pay for itself is to increase population in the country served by it. It has arranged with the Western Canada Colonization Company, backed by the C. P. R. and the Dominion government, to assist in attracting settlers to the Pacific Great Eastern country. The government is now negotiating with representatives of Swiss colonization organizations with a view to having colonies of Swiss farmers established in central British Columbia.

The government is also determined to make a strong bid for a big share of the Western tourist business, because the cities of Vancouver and Victoria have proved during the past two or three years the phenomenal results that can be attained from judicious advertising for tourists. Certain interests, close to the provincial government, are urging the enlargement of the government's present "Information Bureau" so as to give representation to all portions of the province in one central tourist organization.

NOTES BY THE WAY

By "Observer"

The bird hunting season is again in full force. We are hearing many tales of the birds that were shot, but very few of those who got away. At this early date we have heard of many careless hunters, who do not look before they fire. There are also many of the game hogs from the city patrolling the roads, especially Orientals, who slip out from the city every morning, in their touring cars and limousines, and are not particular where they shoot. The game wardens should pay particular attention to those.

In the issue of the 11th inst., Mr. Geo. I. Warren, who signs himself as Commissioner of the Victoria and Island Publicity Bureau, takes issue with some criticisms expressed by me in relation to a folder compiled by himself or some of his staff, entitled "Industrial Victoria." Mr. Warren wields the "Big Stick" and endeavors to show that by doubting the articles in question I am attacking the City of Victoria. Many people are of the opinion that if you cannot shower taffy you should not criticize, everything should be shown up in the brightest colors and none of the deficiencies mentioned.

Mr. Warren takes exception to the query re "Victoria is in receipt of probably the steadiest and largest per capita payroll of any city in the Dominion of Canada." Now, Mr. Warren, as this booklet is entitled "Industrial Victoria" would not any reader think that you were mentioning Industries when you mentioned "Payroll"? I have yet to learn that the Civil Servants are classed among the "Producers" of a city or town. To state that the B. C. Coast Service is a Victoria Payroll, is, in my way of thinking, also stretching it, as this money is earned, as well as spent, outside of Victoria.

With reference to the statement about irrigation not being necessary on Vancouver Island, I would again refer Mr. Warren to his friends in the Chamber of Commerce, many of whom, as members of the Greater Victoria Water Scheme, again and again stated in their speeches throughout the district that irrigation was necessary in order to grow crops that would pay the cost of production, and many of these speakers are themselves using many systems of irrigation on their farms.

With reference to my query to the statement that "Houses are cheaper in Victoria than in any other residential city in Canada," Mr. Warren dismisses with an airy wave of the hand, and states that that question is not at issue at the present moment, I do not know any question that is more at issue at present.

Business men, in making statements in their advertisements, are always ready to prove their statements, but Mr. Warren, contrariwise, wishes any doubter to disprove his, thus putting forward a new principle. As Mr. Warren states that he is ready to prove all his statements, will he please do so.

With reference to Mr. Warren's next paragraph, wherein he states that the statements were written with the idea of knocking Victoria, and his reference to the Victoria advertisers, I may state that the article in question was written because I doubt in my mind many of the statements contained therein. In order to put the whole facts before the readers of this paper, I am going to ask the Editor to publish the items noted "Victoria Pointers" in the booklet in question, and let the readers judge for themselves.

FALL TREATMENT OF NEW SEEDINGS OF GRASSES, &c.

Pasturing seedings of grasses and clovers in the fall of the season sown is probably one of the greatest reasons why many promising stands prove a disappointment the following season. Any pasturing to be done the same year as sown must be done carefully and early, so that sufficient growth will be left to protect the stand during the winter. Late, close pasturing or pasturing when the ground is wet should never be practised either with an old or a new seeding if maximum results are to be obtained the following year. Late, close pasturing, particularly of new seedings, lessens the vitality of the plants by removing the protection which full growth furnishes and so exposes the plants to mere winter killing than would be the case if some growth were left. Fall growth also holds the snow which is itself a valuable protection from extremely low temperature or sudden temperature changes. Not only will late, close pasturing endanger the stand by weakening the vitality, but even though the plants come through the winter without killing they will not start as early nor make as vigorous a growth as where late growth had been left as winter protection. Where some growth is left the previous season it serves as a mulch under the protection of which the new shoots can make an early and a vigorous spring growth.

Grasses and clovers, particularly the latter are injured to a great extent by heaving in the spring. This is caused by alternate cold weather and thaws and a mulch of a previous season's growth tends to lessen this loss by protecting the plants from rapid temperature changes in the early spring.

It best results are to be obtained from grass and clover, seedings particularly new seedings, late, close pasturing must not be practised neither must heavy pasturing be done when the land is wet. Certainly what pasture may be available during the year sown will not pay for the loss of feed the following season where a seeding has been pastured late the previous fall.

a Lunatic Asylum
By HEADON HILL

A Supper at Cremorne

"I must leave her to Vic," he told himself, and forcing a conventional remark he dismissed her to her duties. Among the letters in the mail-bag he had noticed one in his son's hand-writing for Elmslie, and all he could do was to pin his trust to it. He would have liked to telegraph for Victor to come and advise him in his dilemma, but, in face of what Victor had said about the risk he should run in establishing a connection between himself and the Grey House just then, he knew that it would be useless. He would see that another double dose of the "something from Zineraft" was administered at dinner-time, and trust fearfully for better results.

Passing through the hall, Elmslie found her letter, and bore it off to her own room for perusal in private. It was rather longer than the one received by Simon, and the first line of it set her heart beating wildly.

"Dearest Nina," it began, "will you come up to town and see me as my betrothed wife? Since we parted in anger the other day, circumstances have put it in my power to make you this offer, which, believe me, it cut me to the heart to have to withhold then. It is quite possible that we may have to leave the country together, but after what has passed between us I do not think you will mind making that sacrifice. Owing to the miscarriage of certain plans of mine I have been much worried lately, and that must be my excuse for speaking roughly at our last interview about a marriage which was then financially impossible, but which I now look forward to with delight. Show that you have forgiven me by asking the old man for leave of absence, and run up to town tomorrow. We will have supper at Cremorne, and I will order a brougham to drive you back to the Grey House afterwards—to save propriety. There is no reason why we should not be married within the next fortnight—now that I know how I stand. I will meet you at the main entrance at eight o'clock.

"Yours ever,
"Victor."

Elmslie's fine eyes glittered with triumph. This was what she had been scheming for during the last four years—ever since, in fact, she had first met Victor Vantbrace at the very resort to which he now invited her. None knew better than she the heartless villainy of the man, his selfishness, and his vanity; but, with the blind fatality that marks the loves of strong-natured women, she had never swerved from a mad desire to possess him for her very own, recognizing perhaps a kindred spirit such as she was never likely to meet again.

"I am glad of this," she sighed, as she folded up the letter. "Simon must have told him of those feverish symptoms yesterday, and he thinks it will be all over in a day or two. It shall be now, no matter what is the cause of the hitch this morning. It is humiliating to have had to wait till he had played for a proud pussy-cat like our dear Miss Milborne—and lost the game. But it was the money he was after—this letter shows it—and I shall get him."

Artful, even in his distress, Simon had many reasons to aver why she could not possibly be spared when she presented herself, an hour later, with a request for leave, promising to be back at the asylum in time to resume her duties in the morning. But his well-forged reluctance yielded at last, and no anxious was he for Victor to have his own way with this spy in the castle, that he ordered out the battered brougham to convey her to Exbridge Station.

Before she left, Elmslie went into Kate's room again. The prisoner was gazing out of the window into the grounds, where "the Honorable Mr. Talgarth" was walking in charge of a keeper. There was a smile on Kate's face as she turned to her principal jailer, and gliding swiftly to the window Elmslie perceived the same. Miss Lottie Vantbrace, pardoned long since for her escapade, had resumed the process of "soothing" the aristocratic patient.

To the experienced eye of the nurse, Kate seemed even better and brighter than in her last visit. The girl carried her head high, with something of defiance, and answered the few test questions put to her in tones of calm disdain.

"Strange," muttered Elmslie, as she went down to the carriage. "She can't have been hiding her food instead of eating it, yet there is certainly nothing wrong with her today. She's even able to amuse herself with the manœuvres of the gentle Lottie to fascinate that mad swell. Simon is evidently aiding and abetting his daughter's little game, by the way, or he'd have locked her up after the other night."

It was late in the afternoon when Elmslie arrived in town, and having some shopping to do, she was none too soon for her appointment. Victor Vantbrace, who had had reasons for preceding her to Chelsea, was already awaiting her at the gates of the gay Gardens, where nightly collected all that was most lively and least respectable of London life.

He sprang forward politely to help her out of the cab, but as they strolled into the brilliantly-lighted grounds together he made no allusion to the subject of his letter. Under the circumstances, Elmslie had not expected any lover-like raptures, and saw nothing remarkable in the omission. She was bent on enjoying herself for the moment, and quite content with gratuitous capitulation, which, otherwise, she had intended to use her knowledge of his dark secret to enforce. It was pleasant to gain her ends without reference to the "something from Zineraft" with which, at Victor's bidding, Simon was so busy.

"I have ordered supper in one of the cabinets particuliers at the restaurant," said Victor. "You are looking so charming tonight, that I am glad I thought of a private room where there will be no admiring eyes to make me jealous."

He led the way to one of the little boxes in the central pavilion, where the table had been laid for two. The waiter, who had remained to see that everything was in readiness, disappeared according to the custom of the place, and the pair were left alone. Elmslie, as she sipped her champagne, was striving to find an excuse for alluding in a natural manner to Kate Milborne's health, for she wanted Victor to know of the unaccountable hitch in his plans, but being unaware that he had guessed her discovery of them, she feared to give herself away by approaching the subject abruptly.

Victor himself came to her relief. He was equally anxious to raise a question on which so much depended, and he was prevented by no such need for secrecy, for if certain dispositions which he had made went wrong during the next few minutes, Elmslie's power over him would be broken. It was not for nothing that ever since they had seated themselves he had been flinging covert glances at the door.

"I saw the old man yesterday, and he told me that the Milborne girl was ailing," he said casually. "How was she today?"

"Oh! that was all nonsense," replied Elmslie, quickly. "She looked flushed and excited when I went into her room yesterday morning, and I mistook it for illness. She is all right today."

"You jumped to a conclusion, eh?" remarked Victor, trying to hide his surprise and chagrin under a sinister smile. At the same time he rose hurriedly and strode towards the door, for Elmslie's news had altered all his plans, and a shuffling foot-step outside told him that there was no time to lose if he was to prevent the tragedy for which he had laid a train. He had need of Nina Elmslie yet.

So it was, that when Zineraft entered, flushed with drink and mousting in inarticulate rage, Victor promptly snatched away the pistol which he was drawing. Then, pushing the wretched creature into a chair, he shut and locked the door, with ready presence of mind treating as a joke the crime which he had speed on him and Simon, but the time had come for confidences. For a while at least, so long as he had a use for her, they must put together.

a climax which should rid him of both these human obstacles. And now, suddenly, he found that he wanted one of them—not both.

"Why, Zink, old man, what's the meaning of this little jest?" he laughed. "Rehearsing for a melodrama at the Surrey, eh? You shouldn't do it with such dangerous toys as this, though. You might have hurt some one."

Zineraft blinked sullenly at the pistol in his hated patron's hand. "I would have shot her first, and myself afterwards; there was no jest about it," he growled. And then, turning upon Elmslie in a sudden access of fury, which only the crash of the brass band prevented from being heard outside the cabinet, he shouted at her—

"Fool You throw me over for a man who has been trying to poison you—would have had you stark and cold by now if I had not prevented him."

Victor Vantbrace started in real surprise at having a crime attributed to him which, till five minutes ago, he had hoped to have perpetrated for him vicariously and by quite a different method. Elmslie, on this occasion a shade quicker of wit, was the first to catch an inkling of the situation.

"You little wretch!" she said, taking her cue from Victor, and adopting a playful tone; "if Vic has been trying to poison me, I'll bet it was you who supplied the stuff to do it with."

The effect of this speech upon Zineraft was ludicrous. In his triumph at having as he thought, for once thwarted the aims of his employer, he forgot his jilting for a moment, and began to chuckle, tottering to his feet and pointing a jeering finger.

"He said it was for the yard dog, but I knew," he wheezed. "Haden't I just heard you quarrelling—not five minutes before he asked for the stuff? But I was clever—too clever for you, Mr. Victor Vantbrace—and I made you up a prescription that wouldn't hurt a baby. There were eight ounces of distilled water, sir, in that bottle, and not a grain of a drug, good, bad or indifferent."

And the little man grimaced like a monkey in a malicious glee that was sore-lived.

For, strangely enough, it was not Victor Vantbrace, with most at stake owing to Zineraft's action, who loosed off the vials of his wrath upon him, but Nina Elmslie, who thought that her flight with Victor would be delayed by it.

"Idiot!" she hissed. "Drunken imbecile! How dare you accuse Mr. Vantbrace of such an intention! He and I thoroughly understand each other, and your folly has done me as much harm as him. I—"

"That will do, dear girl," drawled Victor, laying a restraining hand upon her arm. "Zinky recognizes, I think from the look of him, that you had more reason to wish the decease of the yard dog than I. He has made a mistake, but it is not too late to rectify it, seeing that, as you say, you and I understand each other. Let us take a stroll in the grounds, as he has spoilt our supper, and leave him to repent at leisure."

For, under the lash of Elmslie's tongue, and seeing that his cleverness had failed of its mark, the miserable, drink-sodden fool was grovelling again. He had buried his head in his hands, and alcoholic tears were dripping through his shrunken fingers. What was passing through his muddled brain at that moment can never be known, but probably it was a wild regret that he had not put strychnine in the bottle, and so won the favor of the woman he adored, whosoever it was to slay. There is no analysis for the mental processes of such as he.

Elmslie put on her cloak, and, flinging one last scornful epithet at the broken man, swept out of the room. Victor made as though to follow, but, pausing on the threshold, he came swiftly back and laid upon the table among the debris of the supper the weapon which he had wrested from Zineraft. The latter, looking through his fingers, met Victor's coldly-smiling eyes with a shudder that racked him as with ague, and then, after one fleeting glance at the pistol, buried his head again.

Without a word, Victor stepped to the door, and, shutting it after him, rejoined Elmslie amid the palms of the great central pavilion. It was not his game to let her see that he had received proof of her having sped on him and Simon, but the time had come for confidences. For a while at least, so long as he had a use for her, they must put together.

It is plain that you have guessed at the mischief and delay caused by that little monkey's folly."

"Yes; I think I know who the yard dog was," Elmslie replied, laughing harshly. "What shall we do now? Find some other way?"

"I must," said Vantbrace, with a savage snarl for the man who had foiled him. "And I must find it quickly, too, for any day may bring a legal demand for the fair Kate's release. That would simply bust up the Grey House and send a lot of us to jail."

"Have you got any plan?"

"Broadly, yes; but I must trust to you and the old man for details," said Victor, dropping his voice. "I never do myself what I can get done for me. My notion is that homicide oughtn't to come difficult in an establishment where homicidal lunatics are kept. Have you got any of that sort in stock at present?"

"There's one—a real terror—in the male refractory ward," replied Elmslie, after a moment's hesitation, for even her cruel heart revolted from the proposal. "He is a person who was crossed in love, and wants to strangle every woman he sees. Of course, I have nothing to do with him, and don't know much about his case, except that he gives the keepers a lot of trouble. The governor would be able to post you up about him."

"Then I shall have to chance it and run down to the Grey House with you tonight," said Victor. "If this reverend loony chanced to get loose in the grounds while a certain person was taking exercise there, it would end the matter, and no one to blame but a keeper."

"Victor, you are the fiend himself, I believe. I can't think how it is that I love you so," Elmslie said, looking up in his face almost shrilly.

"Hark! I have been waiting for that," was the inconsequent reply. "Let us get away as quickly as we can. I think that our friend Zineraft must have meant what he said when he confessed to having started out to commit murder and suicide. At any rate it seems as if he had carried out the second part of his program."

For a pistol-shot had rung out from the cabinet particulier in which Victor and Elmslie had supped; and as the pair made their way to the exit, a group of attendants and revellers were hovering with scared faces round the door of the little room.

CHAPTER XXXI.

The Last Fight for Time

When the Honorable Mr. Talgarth was locked into the private room, which by virtue of his aristocratic standing had been assigned to him at the Grey House, he became, as will have been guessed long ago, largely if he had had an interruption from Lottie to apprehend.

block of wood with which the fond Lottie had furnished him, he wasn't really locked in at all, unless he chose.

He had used it the moment he received it from Miss Vantbrace on the first night he spent in the asylum, and it was that little bit of wood, nothing more, which had caused those "feverish symptoms" in Kate, which had sent Elmslie and Simon all astray in their calculations. For, after the ignominious repulse of Lottie by Elmslie, he had emerged from his room when all was quiet, and, tapping at Kate's door, had aroused her hopes by whispering through the keyhole—

"There is a friend in the house to help you to escape—sent by Mr. Cathcart. Expect me forty-eight hours hence."

On returning to his room he had removed the block of wood from the lock, and had allowed himself to be properly secured during the second day and night of his stay at the Grey House, thinking rightly that he would run too great a risk of having his device discovered in the extra attention that would be paid to him after being found on the landing with the proprietor's daughter.

But on the third day, on being shut up after his afternoon exercise in the grounds, he skillfully "palmed" the wedge into the matrix of the lock without being seen by the keeper as he passed in. His experiences during the last two days had convinced him that he was not an object of suspicion; Simon, with a knowledge of his daughter's aspirations, having blamed the whole of the nocturnal irregularity on Lottie.

And Alf had good reasons for wanting a free range that night. His ears, ever agog, had gathered from the gossip among the keepers that the head-nurse had gone away on leave and was not expected back till the morning. In fact, he had himself witnessed her departure, and had verified the length of her absence by an appeal to Miss Vantbrace, who, as has been recorded, was engaged in the soothing process at the time.

"I suppose she'll be in before midnight, or we might have tried for another interview when all the folks are gone to bye-bye," he had said, with a jerk of his thumb at the carriage.

But Lottie had shaken her head dolefully. "It would have been a good chance," she had sighed. "Elmslie is a hussy, and has got round the old man for a night off, but he locks me into my room now."

"And a good job too!" was Alf's ungrateful appreciation of Simon's precaution. For good news as was the absence of Elmslie, who he knew occupied a room on the front landing, it would have been discounted as will have been guessed long ago, largely if he had had an interruption from Lottie to apprehend.

COOKIE RECIPES

The following recipes are tried and true, easy to make and not expensive. The modern cook should know the cookies are much better if the dough is chilled thoroughly before using; this leaves the butter hard and so does not require so much flour. The less flour used the better the cookies are. The oven must be watched carefully, especially for molasses cookies:

FRUIT COOKIES

Cream one cup of butter, add one and one-half cups sugar, one-half cup of milk, one egg, four level teaspoons of baking powder, a level teaspoonful of grated nutmeg and one-third cup of raisins or currants, chopped fine. Mix with flour to make a dough, cut in rounds, wet the tops with milk and sprinkle with sugar. Bake quickly.

MOLASSES COOKIES

Use one-half cup of molasses, one-half cup of butter, one-half cup hot water in which one level teaspoonful of soda has been dissolved. Mix with one rounding teaspoonful of ginger and enough flour to make a dough that can be rolled out half an inch thick.

GRANDMA'S GINGER SNAPS

Mix thoroughly one cup of molasses with two-thirds cup of lard, one egg, one cup of sugar, three level teaspoonfuls of ginger, one of cloves and one of cinnamon. Add flour enough to roll. Roll a piece as big as a marble till round; place in a pan two inches apart. Care must be taken not to get too much flour.

PLAIN COOKIES

Mix one-half cup of butter and one-half cup of lard with two cups of sugar, one cup of milk and two well-beaten eggs. Sift six level teaspoons of baking powder with four cups of flour, and use as much of the flour as is needed to make a dough that will roll out; of some kinds of flour the whole four cups will be needed. After the cookies have been placed in the pan, press a raisin into the top of each.

COCOANUT COOKIES

Beat one cup of sugar and one cup of thick sour cream together, add one beaten egg, one level teaspoonful of soda and flour enough to make as soft as possible, and roll out. Sprinkle the top of each cookie with shredded cocoanut and press lightly. Bake in quick oven. These cookies should be rolled about half an inch thick.

SUGAR COOKIES

Cream two-thirds of a cup of butter, add one cup of sugar and one-half cup of sour milk. Stir in one-half of a level teaspoonful of soda, one egg, a little nutmeg and as little pastry flour as can be used and roll them out thin. Cut in shapes and bake in quick oven.

CROP REPORT

Below will be found a brief synopsis of telegraphic reports received at the head office of the Bank of Montreal from its branches. The branch managers have complete and intimate knowledge of each local situation and are in close touch with crop conditions in all sections of the districts mentioned.

General

Despite lateness of season, yields that must be considered as satisfactory have been harvested in nearly all districts throughout the Dominion. The Prairie Provinces as a whole show increases in all kinds of grains as compared with last year. Estimated yields based upon Dominion Bureau of Statistics, give yields wheat 445,000,000 bushels as compared with 375,000,000 bushels last year and 360,187,000 in banner year 1915. Yield of wheat, oats and barley placed at 950,930,000 bushels, an increase compared with last year of no less than 232,464,000 bushels; low grades in Manitoba are balanced by high grade in Alberta and so far 90.4% of wheat inspected is in contract grade. Ontario's crops generally are lower than record breaking crops of 1922 but returns are good. In Quebec, farmers have had good year. In Maritime Provinces returns on whole average up well. In British Columbia returns generally are better than last year. Details follow:

Prairie Provinces

Since August 5 farmers have delivered 125,120,000 bushels new wheat as compared with 126,160,000 bushels for corresponding period last year when harvest was earlier. Rail ways handling grain expeditiously. Shipments from Lake head since Sept. 1 33,303,000 bushels. Threshing in Manitoba practically completed. Saskatchewan 75%; Alberta 50%; grades in Manitoba disappointing; Saskatchewan good and in Alberta high.

Province of Quebec

Exceptionally good hay crop harvested in Eastern Townships and Montreal districts; lower St. Lawrence and Northern districts, however, were poor. Yield of cereal crop, although considered satisfactory, not as large as last year. Roots being harvested in good condition; bumper crop looked for generally, especially potatoes. Fruit crops below average. Grass pasture in good condition throughout summer in most districts. The agricultural community has had satisfactory year.

Province of Ontario

Yields of all grain show an estimated average decrease of 16% as against last year, being 135,000,000 bushels as against 152,000,000 last year; hay and clover 5,799,422 tons against 5,670,000. Corn averages 7 tons to acre against 10 tons; potatoes 110 bushels per acre against 160 bushels, other roots about same percentage of decrease. Fruit crop much lighter than last year. Winter apples will not average more than 75% of normal crop. Pasture on whole was fair.

Maritime Provinces

New Brunswick: Cold dry season caused shortage in all crops but potatoes. Hay 75% crop good quality. Grass pasture hardly fair. Potato acreage about 80% of 1922; results excellent; crop averaging about double yield of 1922. Northern districts poor. Nova Scotia: Except apples and oats all crops above average. Hay record crop, excellent quality, 1,200,000 tons against 970,000 in 1922; grass pasture above average. Annapolis Valley suffered another severe gale Oct. 1. Apple estimates now under 1,500,000 barrels against 1,831,000 in 1922. Prince Edward Island: Crops generally above average; harvest late and much damage caused by gale Oct. 1.

Province of British Columbia

Weather conditions this season have been favorable for crops except latterly for roots and pasture. Yields generally better than last year and compare favorably with previous. Hay and oats heavy, quality good, potatoes acreage low, yield light, roots small crop, tomatoes 50% of average. Hops heaviest for years, small fruits and cherries above average, peaches, apricots and pears below average; plums and prunes good crop; apples 20% increase over last year; pasture season uneven.

WORTH REMEMBERING

A PINCH OF SALT

The cheapest coffee will not taste bitter if a pinch of salt is added to the coffee before it begins to percolate. It will also give it a delicious flavor.

ATTRACTIVE EGGS

When frying eggs on one side, pour several spoonfuls of hot grease over the tops. It will give the eggs a creamy appearance and be more attractive when served.

OLD TURKISH TOWELS

Worn out Turkish towels are excellent cloths for bathroom cleaning. They are so soft they will not scratch, yet heavy enough to stand the hard wear of the cleansing powder.

IN THE HICK ROOM

It is wise to use dishes of different pattern from those of the rest of the family when fixing a tray for the invalid. It not only means a change to the sick person, but the dishes can be washed and kept separate.

FOR ALL JELLIES

Cook the fruit in its own juices, or, if necessary, a small amount of water until soft. Strain and add equal amount of sugar. Cook until a little will "jell" on a saucer, skimming frequently.

TIMELY TIPS

Powdered bath brick will remove stains from steel knives.
A handful of salt in the water when washing colored clothes will prevent the color from running.
Wash the chamomile after each using in warm water in which a pinch of baking soda has been dissolved and it will retain its softness.

For U.S. President?

When Henry Ford was asked by Montreal reporters if he would run for President of the United States, he said, "I am not running for or against anything", but when asked if he would accept nomination if proffered, the motor car king replied:
"No one knows what they will do from one day to another."
Mr. Ford is here seen in conversation with Mr. Grant Hall, vice-president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, at Windsor Station, Montreal.

ADVERTISING PAYS

The merchant who does not advertise is as far behind the times as the old-time stage coach. He plods along in the same old way, year after year, while the more progressive merchant places his wares before the public and increases his business year by year. Persistent advertising has made millions for many progressive merchants, who recognized the value of advertising from the first day they commenced business. The Review goes into almost every home in the district and is the proper medium for reaching the people.

RUDE RURAL RHYMES

BREEDING BETTER BOSSIES

I praise the pure bred dairy bull; of usefulness his days are full. He is the pride of all our kine, the father of a noble line. He walks with grace upon the earth, and all his daughters prove his worth. The other day I read with joy of such a bull in Illinois. I sing that good old Holstein sport, whom men call Homestead. Just for short, thus whittling down an honored name, because they can't pronounce the same. Behind him back they set some spotters to check upon his first ten daughters. They weighed the milk, and after that they tested it for butter fat. When told the record of her bag, each daughter had a right to brag: "With all respect to Ma, I am a darned sight better than my dam. Yet mother was the best they had, the difference is due to dad." If he had bred scrub cows and such his record would be nothing much, but Homestead was a real go-getter because he made a good herd better. His progeny at pall and end will be a credit to his blood. I think that we should also raise a monument to speak his praise. His life was lowly, but O boy, think what he did for Illinois.

WHAT TWO DOLLARS WILL BUY

In each of its many departments, catering to all classes and all ages, the Family Herald and Weekly Star, of Montreal, has continued to improve each year over the last until now it would seem perfection were reached. Yet for the coming season that remarkable farm and family journal again promises—and the promise will surely be fulfilled—still further improvements in all departments. It is a profound mystery to publishers the world over how the Family Herald and Weekly Star can continue to publish a 72-page weekly paper containing such a wealth and variety of reading matter for a subscription price of only $2.00 per year. If this were not enough, we hear that, added to the amazing value of the paper itself, each subscriber this season who remits in time will receive free a most beautiful picture in colors of a lovely and heroic woman, whose remarkable life story can be purchased in book form, and can be obtained without charge from the Family Herald and Weekly Star, Montreal.

SPLIT IN GULF ISLANDS BOARD OF TRADE

Sir:

A few lines explaining the situation will, I think, interest some of your readers. At the annual meeting at Ganges, on Oct. 12, Mr. W. Scott proposed a motion increasing the representation of Salt Spring on the Board 100 per cent., the motion had never been mentioned at any council meeting and the first notice that it was to be brought forward was in the call for the meeting four days before, the alteration in numbers from Salt Spring gave that district a permanent majority on the Board, which had hitherto been about equally balanced, the smaller islands having a slight majority which practically vanished through difficulties in gathering.

The Islanders showed their feeling in the matter by only being represented at the meeting by a dozen members instead of sixty. The president pointed out that if the motion was carried it would wreck the association and drew attention to how fair and workable the present arrangement was. Individual members appealed for unity but the motion was carried after a recess. The president before the election of new officers, resigned stating he did not wish to have any hand in carrying out a policy which he considered unjust to a section of the Board and left the meeting with the other Islanders. The action of Mr. W. E. Scott and associates in wrecking a body which during the past year has increased in membership from 35 to 124 cannot be too strongly censured. The Board was doing good work on the Islands and had a bright future ahead. That there was no sectional spirit the following will show, on being elected president looking over the lists of members, I noticed that they appeared on the Salt Spring list to be all in the neighborhood of Ganges. I wrote to Mr. R. Price, the nearest member to Fulford and asked him to try and get members from there as the steamer service the previous summer (1922) had been so poor and pressure on the council from members would help. Our course at the meeting is generally endorsed by those who were not present.

E. MAUDE,

Late president G.I.B.T.

SIDNEY-BELLINGHAM FERRY

The Canadian Pacific Railway Company has no intention of withdrawing the Sidney-Bellingham ferry service, according to a report submitted to the directors of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce yesterday, by Mr. George I. Warren, secretary. Mr. Warren stated that he had taken the question up last week with Captain J. W. Troup, manager of the British Columbia coast steamship service, and Mr. W. H. Snell, general passenger agent at Vancouver, and they had been emphatic in stating that the service would not be discontinued.

Mr. Troup had not outlined the plans of the company in regard to the service, added Mr. Warren.

The directors authorized the dispatch of a letter to Captain Troup expressing the Chamber's gratification at the company's decision to retain the ferry service.

ARRANGING CONFERENCE

The executive committee of the Vancouver Island district of the Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. B. Deacon, Marine Drive, in conjunction with a visit by Mrs. R. Henderson, chairman of the advisory board of the W.I., and Mrs. V. S. MacLachlan, secretary of the W.I. A discussion took place on the coming conference to be held in Victoria in November. Valuable suggestions were brought forward. A number of speakers' names was suggested which would make the conference a very interesting one. A delicious tea was served by Mrs. Deacon. Those present were Mesdames H. Laurie, president of the board of directors for Vancouver Island; W. B. Todd, secretary; V. S. MacLachlan, R. Henderson, Matheson and Raven.

HONOR SILVER WEDDING

A delightful evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. B.
Christopher, 1536 Vining Street, Victoria, on Saturday night, when a large number of relatives gathered to celebrate the silver wedding of Mr.
and Mrs. B. Deacon. Mrs. Deacon, who is a sister of Mrs. Christopher, was the youngest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. H. Thomas Peter, of Kirkland, Scotland, and was married to Mr. B. Deacon, of St. Stephens, N. B., in the Centennial Methodist church by the Rev. Dr. W. H.
Barracough, on October 12, 1898.

On Saturday evening, after the guests were seated in the parlor, Miss Jessie Christopher presented the bride with a beautiful bouquet of pink roses and chrysanthemums, tied with white ribbon, from herself and her younger brother, Edmond. Mr.
J. R. Carmichael, a brother-in-law,
then escorted the bride, while Mrs.
Christopher escorted the bridegroom to the dining-room, the wedding march being played by Miss Jessie Christopher, where on the table was a beautiful display of handsome and dainty silver gifts, in the midst of which a large wedding cake was set.
Mrs. J. Critchley, the oldest sister of the family presented the gifts to the bride and groom with a charming little speech of love and good wishes.
Mr. Deacon, on behalf of himself and his wife, thanked the donors for their great kindness in a few suitable words.

The evening was devoted to cards and music, an added enjoyment being a long distant phone message from Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Henderson, of Seattle. Mr. Henderson is an old friend of the bride, the two families with their parents having crossed the Atlantic together in 1881 and lived close together for some years on the prairies.

A supper was served by Mrs.
Christopher, assisted by the other ladies. The health of the bride and groom was proposed by Mr. Christopher, which was duly honored, also one to Mr. Leslie Deacon, their youngest son, who is in Saskatchewan assisting with the harvest, after which the festivities were brought to a close by the singing of "Auld Lang Syne."

The invited guests were Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Christopher, Miss Jessie Christopher, Master Edmond Christopher, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Carmichael, Mr. W. Carmichael, Mr. and Mrs. J. Critchley and Mr. and Mrs.
A. Critchley, Mr. and Mrs. W. H.
Peters, Mrs. R. Hampton, the Misses Blanche, Madge and Connie Hampton, and Ernest, Richard and Wilfred Hampton, Vancouver; Mr. and Mrs. B. Deacon, Mr. Alan Deacon;
Miss Agnes Turnbull, Mr. and Mrs.
John S. Carmichael, Vancouver; Mr.
and Mrs. L. Young, Miss Dora Young,
Mr. and Mrs. W. Quick and sons, Fred and Brodie Quick, and Mr. and Mrs. F. Quick, of Royal Oak.

LEADING WHEATS FROM OTTAWA

The most noteworthy introduction of the Dominion Experimental Farms as far as wheat is concerned is the variety Marquis which has become world famous in a very short time.
In the year 1892, numerous crosses were made of our Canadian wheats with early wheats from India and Russia, with the result that Marquis wheat was originated from one of these crosses, but it was not until 1903 that a pure line selection was obtained. From then on, Marquis has gradually gained the ascendancy over all other wheats in the West, until today about 80 per cent. of the wheat grown in Canada is Marquis.
It is also worthy of note that 16 per cent. of the wheat grown in the United States of America is Marquis.
One other wheat has a higher percentage than Marquis and that is Turkey, a winter wheat that is grown in the majority of States. Of the spring wheats, however, Marquis is the first in popularity and leads all spring wheats by about 8 per cencent. of the total wheat area of the lon.

In 1919 some twelve million acres of Marquis wheat were grown in the United States

The Experimental Farms, always keeping in mind their objective of an early, high yielding wheat of good milling qualities, have been able to introduce other wheats of less commercial value but still of utmost importance for certain districts. Among these other wheats should be noted Ruby, Prelude and Huron. Ruby wheat is a wheat which ripens about eight to ten days earlier than Marquis and is, therefore, suitable in districts where Marquis, in the average year, is a little too late. Ruby, however, is not as high yielding or of as good milling quality as Marquis, and should, therefore, only be grown in districts where Marquis is not a sure crop. The Prelude wheat is an extremely early wheat, suitable only for districts where the season is very short. Prelude will ripen about 14 days earlier than Marquis, or four to eight days earlier than Ruby.

The above wheats are most adapted to western conditions, but it has been found that they give excellent results under eastern Canadian conditions, especially if grown in somewhat heavier soils. The Cereal division, when considering its wheat work, has always kept in mind the requirements of the east as well as the west, with the result that Huron wheat was introduced for use in eastern Canada on the lighter soils.
Huron is a bearded wheat which gives good results on the sandy soils that are so frequently met with in eastern Canada.

The introduction of the above wheats has financially meant a great deal to Canada. It has been computed by various persons that Marquis wheat alone has added to the wealth of Canada some $20,000, 000 per annum. Apart from the financial aspect, the fact that eighty per cent. of the wheat produced in Canada is Marquis is in itself a sufficient assurance that Marquis has all spring wheats by about 8 per cen-
